WHEN GREEK MEETS WOP.

Mr. Nesbit had just seen the Cohan revue. So had I. The thing that impressed us most was the syncretized trial scene. So when we had formally bowed to each other we thought it would be entertaining to ourselves, if not the assembled company, to talk in ragtime verse. Mr. N.—Hello, old scout. I beg your pardon. But what are you doing at the Bismark garden? Mr. L.—I'm here, Mr. Nesbit, if you don't mind. Because it's the coolest spot that I could find. Mr. N.—Now that you're here, I'm inclined to think That the thing to do is to have a drink. Mr. L.—No, Mr. Nesbit, if you're bound to treat. I think I would rather have a bite to eat. Mr. N.—Then order your victuals at my expense. But remember that the limit is thirty-cents. Mr. L.—I'll take fruit salad without banana. Mr. N.—Is your family down in Indiana? Mr. L.—Yes, and having a good time, too. Mr. N.—That's where they've got the best of you. Mr. L.—If you had partners we could one-step some.

Mr. N.—But I wouldn't dance with you, you poor old bum. Mr. L.—I'd love to dance, but the floor's too waxy. Mr. N.—How'd you come, in a taxi? Mr. L.—No, I walked from town with Kraus. Me and my friend here, Mr. Kraus. Mr. N.—Stay all night with me. Mr. L.—I have a room at the Hotel Grant. Mr. N.—Did you read this morning, in B. L. T.— Mr. L.—His column doesn't appeal to me. Mr. N.—Beg your pardon. Sorry I spoke. Mr. L.—Your pardon's granted and I hope you choke. Mr. N.—Let's go home before it's later. Mr. L.—Wait till I settle with the Prussian waiter. Mr. N.—No, indeed. I will pay the bill. Mr. L.—You must be ill. You must be ill. Mr. N.—Waiter, bring me the check here quick. Mr. L.—You must be sick. You must be sick. Mr. N.—Well, I hope that we meet again. Mr. L.—We will, Mr. N. We will. Mr. N.—Good-night, Lardy. Mr. L.—Good-night, Wilbur. And he gave the waiter thirty cents in silver.

KAISER'S NEPHEW NOW BURIED IN HAZEBROUCK

But When Peace is Eventually Declared Search Will Be Made for the Body.

(SPECIAL TO THE TELEGRAM) WASHINGTON, August 31.—"Many American tourists have stopped over night in the Trappist monastery where, according to a report recently published in a Paris newspaper, the youthful Prince Maximilien died of wounds in the third month of the European war. After nearly two years of mysterious silence concerning the fate of the member of the royal family of Germany, it is now said that Hazebrouck is the place of burial of the kaiser's nephew. This town is only a few miles south of the Belgian border and about eighteen miles from Ypres where the Germans in their first on-ward drive toward the sea were definitely checked by a flooding of the lowlands," according to today's war geography bulletin of the National Geographic Society, issued from its Washington headquarters.

mother, the youngest sister of the kaiser. Severe Fighting. "The fighting to the east of Hazebrouck was exceptionally severe during the early months of the war, for this French town of 12,000 inhabitants is a place of extraordinary strategic value, owing to the fact that it is the junction point of railroads leading to the North sea port of Dunkirk, twenty-five miles to the north; to Arras, seventy-eight miles to the southwest, and to Lille, twenty-nine miles to the southeast. The German advance never reached as far as Hazebrouck. The battle line now runs north and south between Lille and Hazebrouck, about fifteen miles east of the latter. "The town of Godewaersvelde, where Prince Maximilien is supposed to have received his fatal wound, is the last village before crossing the French border into Belgium on the Hazebrouck-Ypres line. Above the little town towers the Mont des Cats, on top of which is situated the modern Trappist monastery where the wounded officer was nursed. "The tourists who frequented the monastery in the days before the war were those who wished to take ad-vanage of its hospitable walls for a night's lodging in order to be able to get an early start for delightful walking excursions over the wooded slopes of Mont Noir and Mont de Lille on the Belgian frontier.

Flourishing Monks. "The Trappists are a flourishing order of Cistercian monks who derive their name from the monastery of La Grande Trappe, at Soligny-la-Trappe, 100 miles southwest of Paris, where Armand Jean le B. de Rance instituted sweeping reforms in the middle of the seventeenth century. De Rance, who at the age of ten had been made commendatory abbot of this twelfth century monastery of La Trappe, after being converted from a worldly life secured permission from Louis XIV to pension the old monks who had ceased to comply with their obligations. He established a new group of Cistercians who adopted the most rigorous rules for fasting, devotional service and silence. The expulsion of the order during the French revolution only seemed to stimulate its growth in its city of refuge—Val Sainte, Switzerland. A quarter of a century after their flight, the Trappists returned to their original home and in the course of the century which has intervened between that day and this the order has spread to many parts of the world, including a congregation of fifty Chinese monks, others in Japan, Asia Minor, Canada and the United States. In Nain the missionary Trappists are particularly active in trying to civilize and convert the Kaffirs and among their activities in this part of the world is the printing of books in the Zulu language. There are also Trappist nunneries, the first being that of Les Clairet, at Chartres, which adopted de Rance's reforms during his lifetime."

OIL AND GAS DEVELOPMENT OF TRI-STATE

Lates Reports of Operations in We Virginia, Pennsylvania and Ohio.

In the West Virginia fields, on Dent's Run, in Mannington district, Marion county, F. W. Bartlett has drilled his second test well on the Z. E. Batson farm into the pay in the Injun sand and it produced 100 barrels in the ensuing twelve hours. This well is located one location south of No. 1 well on the same farm.

On Ten Mile Creek, in Union district, Harrison county, one-half mile below Jarvisville, the Hope Natural Gas Company has completed its third test on the Isaac Stutler farm and has a fair gusher in the Injun sand.

In Centerville district, near Bears-ville Postoffice, Tyler county, the Carnegie Natural Gas Company has completed its second test well on the J. B. Riggs farm through the Big Injun sand and it is dry. This well is located 500 feet west of the same company's No. 1 well on this farm.

In Taylor county, about three and a half miles from Valley Falls, Fetterman district, the Philadelphia company is reported about fifty feet in the Big Injun sand with its second test well on the John Stannage farm and dry in this formation.

The Virginia Oil Company has completed its No. 8 well on the F. K. Bell farm, located in Grant district, Pleasant county, and has a very light producer from the salt sand.

In the Hebron pool, in Mead district, Pleasant county, Neely and Company have completed their initial test well on the T. H. Whaley farm through the Maxon sand and after shooting have a fifteen-barrel per day producer. This location is one-half mile south of D. A. Bartlett's initial test well on the James Morrison farm and is in old territory.

Drilling Deeper in Doddridge. On Spring Run, New Milton district Doddridge county, the Soth Penn Oil Company has completed its initial test well on the L. M. Dennison farm through the Big Injun sand and finding that formation dry are drilling to the Gordon sand.

In the same district and county, the Hope Natural Gas Company has drilled its initial test well on the Grace Nicholson farm and its second test well on the Cordelia Nicholson farm through the Big Injun sand and they are dry. Both wells are being drilled to the Gordon sand.

Duster in Pennsylvania.

In the Mt. Morris Pool, in Dunkirk township, Green county, Pa., the Shear Oil and Gas Company has completed its second test well on the A. J. Beall farm and it is a dry hole.

Cure for Cholera Morbus.

"When our little boy, now seven years old, was a baby he was cured of cholera morbus by Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy," writes Mrs. Sidney Simmons, Fair Haven, N. Y. "Since then other members of my family have used this valuable medicine for colic and bowel troubles with good satisfaction and I gladly endorse it as a remedy of exceptional merit." BETTER THAN GOLD FOUND IN STATE OF MICHIGAN

Charles Whitney Carman.

Charles Whitney Carman, a young and well-known business man of Grand Rapids, Mich., was ordered by his physicians to get out of town and give his mind and body a rest. He did. He bought a "run down" farm near Alaska, Mich. He found Alaska dead for forty years. Carman had to live briskly; he has revived the social life of the community, extended the school term, and has built up a wonderful community spirit.
